

Campus Sexual Assault Victim's Bill of Rights

The "Campus Sexual Assault Victims' Bill of Rights" was enacted in 1992 by the United States Congress as a part of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 (Public Law: 102-325, section 486(c)). This bill exists as a part of the campus security reporting requirements, known as the Jeanne Clery Act. This law requires that all colleges and universities participating in federal student aid programs afford sexual assault victims certain basic rights. This law also requires the college to notify victims of their option to report their assault to the proper law enforcement authorities.

Sexual Assault Victims Bill of Rights

- Survivors will be notified of their options to notify law enforcement.
- Accuser and accused must have the same opportunity to have others present at disciplinary hearings.
- Both parties will be informed of the outcome of any disciplinary proceeding.
- Survivors will be notified of available counseling services.
- Survivors will be notified of options for changing academic and living situations.

Sexual harassment or sexual violence includes domestic violence, stalking, and dating violence. These acts should be reported to Campus Security Authorities (CSA's). Retaliation against individuals reporting sexual harassment and/or sexual violence is prohibited and will be addressed.
