

CRAVEN- PAMLICO RE-ENTRY COUNCIL

OUR STORY

The Craven-Pamlico Re-Entry Council, established by Attorney General Eric Holder in January 2011, represents a significant executive branch commitment to the improvement of policies to help break barriers.

We work with re-entry in all aspects of life, from leaving the prison system and obtaining proper health care to assisting with family stability in all areas of life. We assist the whole being in order to help create more productive returning citizens.

Our primary goals are to:

- Make communities safer by reducing recidivism and victimization
- Assist those who return from prison and jail in becoming productive citizens
- Save taxpayer dollars by lowering the direct and collateral cost of incarceration

IT'S TIME TO MOVE FORWARD

Being incarcerated changes your past, but it does not have to dictate your future. You are going to face some barriers when you re-enter society, but barriers can be overcome. There are people in your community who are invested in your success, and that community is led by the Craven-Pamlico Re-Entry Council (CPRC).

The CPRC believes that those returning from incarceration to society should have a healthy, stable transition. As a result, our chief focus is to remove any obstacles that stand in the way of a successful re-entry.

Our goal is to ensure that motivated individuals who have served their time are able to:

- Compete for a job
- Attain stable housing
- Support their children and families
- Contribute to their communities
- Reduce community crime rates and the collateral cost of incarceration

HOW WE CAN HELP

There are two paths you can take when re-entering society: one leads back to incarceration, and the other sets you up for a healthy, stable transition back into your community. We have developed resources to keep you on the path toward success.

Through a collaboration with Craven Community College, we have developed several free resources to help you at various steps in your re-entry journey.
